According to DPS Memo 2011-51 dated May 13, 2011, "Changes in the Middle Grades Integrated Curriculum certification for instructional personnel assignments which will go into effect beginning with the 2012-2013 school year are as follows:

- The MGIC certification will only be appropriate for instructional personnel assigned to courses designated as Middle/Junior (grades 6-8).
- A symbol will appear in the 2011-2012 Course Code Directory to indicate that all elementary and high school courses that currently allow the MGIC certification, not allow the certification beginning with the 2012-2013 school year. In other words, the MGIC certification will be "daggered" for any elementary and high school courses.
- The MGIC certification for Middle/Junior (M/J) courses will be appropriate only for appointments to these courses prior to July 1, 2012.

It is important to note that educators will have the right to apply for and participate in the MGIC teacher certification examination for a period of three years from the date of repeal of the rule; however, only those teachers holding a MGIC certification appointed prior to July 1, 2012, will be designated as "in field" and/or "highly qualified."
